7 JOHN DOE,
8 Plaintiff,
9 v.
10 CHAD F. WOLF, et al.,
11 Defendants.

Case No. 19-cv-03852-DMR

ORDER ON CROSS MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Re: Dkt. Nos. 31, 33

12 Plaintiff John Doe filed this action under the Administrative Procedure Act (“APA”), 5 13 U.S.C. § 701 et seq. seeking to reverse the decision by the United States Citizenship and 14 Immigration Services (“USCIS”) denying his application for consent to reapply for admission to 15 the United States. Plaintiff now moves pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56 for 16 summary judgment to reverse the February 27, 2019 decision by USCIS’s Administrative Appeals 17 Office (“AAO”) affirming the decision. [Docket No. 31 (Pl.’s Mot.).] Defendants Chad F. Wolf, 18 Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”), Kenneth T. Cuccinelli, Richard Valeika, and USCIS
19 cross-move for summary judgment to affirm the AAO’s decision. [Docket No. 33 (Defs.’ Mot.).]
20 This matter is appropriate for determination without oral argument. Civil L.R. 7-1(b). For the 21 following reasons, Plaintiff’s motion is granted in part. Defendants’ motion is denied.

I. FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

23 This case arises from USCIS’s denial of Plaintiff’s Form I-212 Application for Permission 24 to Reapply for Admission into the United States After Deportation or Removal. The court sets 25 forth the governing statutory framework contained in the relevant provisions of the Immigration 26 and Nationality Act (“INA”), as well as the undisputed facts underlying these cross-motions.

A. Admissibility of Noncitizens

27 In 1996, Congress amended the INA by enacting the Illegal Immigration Reform and 28

1 Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996, Pub. L. No. 104-208, 110 Stat. 3009 (1996) (“IIRIRA”).
2 “IIRIRA established ‘admission’ as the key concept in immigration law and defines the term as 3 ‘the lawful entry of the alien into the United States after inspection and authorization by an 4 immigration officer.’” East Bay Sanctuary Covenant v. Trump, 932 F.3d 742, 756 (9th Cir. 2018)
5 (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(13)(A)) (citing Vartelas v. Holder, 566 U.S. 257, 262 (2012)). A 6 noncitizen seeking “admission” to the United States “cannot gain entry if she is deemed 7 ‘inadmissible’ on any of the numerous grounds set out in the immigration statutes.” Vartelas, 566
8 U.S. at 263 (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1182). In particular, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a) sets forth reasons why 9 noncitizens may be “ineligible to receive visas and ineligible to be admitted to the United States.”
10 In relevant part, the statute provides that a noncitizen who “enters or attempts to enter the United 11 States without being admitted” after having been “unlawfully present in the United States for an 12 aggregate period of more than 1 year” or having “been ordered removed” from the country is 13 inadmissible. 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(i). However, section 1182(a) includes an exception to 14 that basis for inadmissibility. It states that the foregoing category of inadmissibility does not 15 apply under certain circumstances when the alien is seeking admission more than 10 years after 16 having last departed the United States:

17 [§ 1182(a)(9)(C)(i)] shall not apply to an alien seeking admission 18 more than 10 years after the date of the alien’s last departure from the 19 United States if, prior to the alien’s reembarkation at a place outside 20 the United States or attempt to be readmitted from a foreign 21 contiguous territory, the Secretary of Homeland Security has 22 consented to the alien’s reapplying for admission.

23 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii). Therefore, a noncitizen who is inadmissible under § 24 1182(a)(9)(C)(i) “may seek admission into the United States if: (1) he has been absent from the 25 United States more than ten years, and (2) he has received the consent of the Secretary of 26 Homeland Security to the application for readmission.” Gonzales v. Dep’t of Homeland Security, 27 508 F.3d 1227, 1231 (9th Cir. 2007) (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii)). “[P]ermission to 28 reapply [for admission] is sought by the filing of an I-212 form.” Id. (citing 8 C.F.R. § 212.2).

B. Plaintiff's Life in the United States and Mexico

1 Plaintiff John Doe was born in Mexico in 1966. Administrative Record (“A.R.”) 113.<sup>1</sup> 2 His wife is a lawful permanent resident of the United States and two of his four children are 3 United States citizens. A.R. 104, 117-18,120, 122, 124.

4 In 1986, Plaintiff entered the United States without inspection and settled in California.
5 A.R. 104, 469. Between 1986 and 1996, Plaintiff traveled between Mexico and the United States
6 several times, each time entering the United States without inspection. A.R. 469. In 2002, 7 Plaintiff left the United States to visit his parents in Mexico. When he attempted to return to 8 United States in January 2003, U.S. Customs & Border Protection (“CBP”) apprehended him. He 9 was detained and subsequently removed from the United States. A.R. 469, 606-09. Following his 10 removal, Plaintiff re-entered the United States without inspection in January 2003. A.R. 469.
11 Plaintiff’s January 2003 re-entry without inspection rendered him inadmissible under 8 U.S.C. § 12 1182(a)(9)(C)(i). As noted, that provision states that a noncitizen who “enters or attempts to enter 13 the United States without being admitted” after having been “unlawfully present in the United 14 States for an aggregate period of more than 1 year” or having “been ordered removed” from the 15 country is inadmissible. 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(i).

16 Later in 2003, Plaintiff and his wife decided to leave California and move back to Mexico 17 to be close to their families. A.R. 106, 469. They moved to Uruapan in the state of Michoacán, 18 Plaintiff’s hometown, where Plaintiff started a business. A.R. 106. After his 2003 return to 19 Mexico, Plaintiff remained in Mexico for over ten years. A.R. 469.

C. Plaintiff’s 2014 Return to the United States and Request for Asylum

21 According to Plaintiff, at some point after his return to Mexico, a violent group known as 22 Caballeros Templarios or “Knights Templar” took control over Uruapan and imposed taxes on the 23 local businesses, including Plaintiff’s. A.R. 107-08. In 2014, Knights Templar detained 24 Plaintiff’s son for two days. They beat and shot him before releasing him. A.R. 108. Later that 25

26
27 <sup>1</sup> The court granted Plaintiff leave to proceed under a pseudonym in this action due to his fear of persecution if his name were publicly revealed. [Docket No. 11.] The court also granted 28 Defendants leave to file the administrative record under seal as it contains information that identifies Plaintiff. [Docket Nos. 28-3 (A.R.), 30 (Order).]

1 year, Plaintiff became unable to pay the tax to Knights Templar. After missing a payment, armed 2 men visited his business and threatened to kill him and his family if he did not pay. Afraid that he 3 would be killed, Plaintiff left Michoacán with his wife and children the following day. A.R. 108.

4 Plaintiff arrived with his family at the Otay Mesa port of entry in San Diego, California on 5 June 26, 2014. He presented himself to a CBP officer and requested asylum in the United States.
6 A.R. 469, 592-94. Plaintiff was presumed inadmissible to the United States, served with a Notice 7 and Order of Expedited Removal from the United States, and detained pending an interview by an 8 asylum officer. A.R. 570-73, 575-76, 592-94, 597-99. An asylum officer interviewed Plaintiff in 9 July 2014 and found that he had a credible fear of torture. A.R. 550-69. Thereafter, Plaintiff's 10 order of expedited removal was vacated and he was ordered to appear before an immigration 11 judge. A.R. 548-49. On August 22, 2014, CBP released Plaintiff from detention and paroled him 12 into the United States until August 22, 2015 pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 212.5, which authorizes parole 13 "on a case-by-case basis for 'urgent humanitarian reasons' or 'significant public benefit.'" A.R.
14 115, 484; 8 C.F.R. § 212.5(b). The statute under which Plaintiff received parole expressly states 15 that parole under such circumstances "shall not be regarded as an admission of the alien" to the 16 United States, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A), and Plaintiff's parole document states that it is "not valid 17 for employment nor entry into the U.S.A." A.R. 115, 484.

18 D. Plaintiff's Form I-485 and Form I-212 Applications

19 After being paroled into the United States, Plaintiff relocated to the San Francisco Bay 20 Area.<sup>2</sup> In June 2015, Plaintiff's U.S. citizen daughter filed a Form I-130 Petition for Alien 21 Relative on his behalf and Plaintiff filed a Form I-485 Application to Register Permanent 22 Residence or Adjust Status to become a lawful permanent resident (the "I-485 application"). A.R.
23 457-63, 476, 477. Plaintiff also filed a Form I-212 Application for Permission to Reapply for 24 Admission Into the United States After Deportation or Removal (the "I-212 application"), seeking 25 consent to reapply for admission under the exception to inadmissibility found in 8 U.S.C. §

27 _____
28 <sup>2</sup> Plaintiff later filed an Application for Asylum and for Withholding of Removal, which was administeratively closed in 2015 at his request. A.R. 471, 473-75, 533-45.

1 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii). A.R. 70-71. In his I-212 Application, Plaintiff acknowledged the following 2 bases for his inadmissibility: “I entered or attempted to enter the United States without being 3 admitted or paroled after having been removed (INA section 212(a)(9)(C)(i)(I))” and “I entered or 4 attempted to enter the United States without being admitted or paroled after having been 5 unlawfully present in the United States for a period of more than 1 year, in the aggregate (INA 6 section 212(a)(9)(c)(i)(I)).” A.R. 71.

7 USCIS approved Plaintiff’s daughter’s I-130 Petition in March 2016. A.R. 417. In 8 October 2016, USCIS denied Plaintiff’s I-485 application to adjust status. A.R. 432-33. In its 9 decision, USCIS stated that Plaintiff was ineligible to adjust his status because he was 10 inadmissible under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C). It further stated that Plaintiff could not seek consent 11 to reapply for admission under section 1182(a)(9)(C) because “consent to reapply . . . is available 12 only if the applicant is outside the United States, and only after the applicant has been abroad for 13 at least 10 years.” A.R. 433 (emphasis added).<sup>3</sup> Plaintiff moved to reopen and to reconsider the 14 decision. A.R. 82-85. On January 10, 2017, USCIS granted Plaintiff’s motion, set aside the 15 denial of the I-485 application, and placed the application “in a pending status for further review.”
16 A.R. 69.

17 On August 3, 2018, USCIS denied Plaintiff’s I-212 application and also denied his I-485
18 application for the second time. A.R. 47-50 (I-212 denial), 60-68 (I-485 denial). USCIS’s denial 19 of the I-212 application rested on its conclusion that Plaintiff was not eligible to file the 20 application while he was physically present in the United States:

21 [O]ne cannot obtain consent to reapply [for admission] . . . after 22 returning to the United States, whether one physically entered the 23 United States by being inspected and admitted, by being paroled, or by entering without inspection; the request for readmission must be made prior to any attempt to enter the United States.

24 A.R. 49. USCIS denied Plaintiff’s I-485 application due to his ineligibility to file a Form I-212 to 25 seek consent to reapply for admission. A.R. 61.

26
27
28 <sup>3</sup> USCIS also stated that Plaintiff was inadmissible under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(A), a separate provision of the INA that USCIS later conceded does not apply to Plaintiff. A.R. 52, 432-33.

1           E.       The AAO's February 27, 2019 Decision

2           Plaintiff appealed the denial of his I-212 application to USCIS's AAO. A.R. 12-16. The 3 AAO dismissed his appeal in a decision issued on February 27, 2019. A.R. 3-7. It noted that "the 4 sole issue is whether [Plaintiff] is eligible to file a Form I-212, Application for Permission to 5 Reapply for Admission, after he has been paroled into the United States." A.R. 5 (emphasis in 6 original). It answered this question in the negative, concluding that Plaintiff "is ineligible to apply 7 for permission to reapply for admission under section 212(a)(9)(C)(ii) of the [Immigration and 8 Nationality] Act [8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii)] in the United States and must file his application 9 from abroad." A.R. 5. The AAO stated its reasoning as follows: "[e]very application form . . .
10 must be submitted to USCIS and executed in accordance with the form instructions, which have 11 the weight of regulations," citing 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(a)(1). A.R. 5. In turn, 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(a)(1) 12 states in relevant part that "[e]very form, benefit request, or other document must be submitted to 13 DHS and executed in accordance with the form instructions regardless of a provision of 8 CFR 14 chapter I to the contrary. The form's instructions are hereby incorporated into the regulations 15 requiring its submission."

16           According to the AAO, "[t]he form instructions for Form I-212 state, 'you may not file an 17 application for consent to reapply if you are inadmissible under INA section 212(a)(9)(C) and . . .
18 [y]ou are in the United States.'" A.R. 5. Additionally, the AAO cited 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(a)(6) 19 which states, "[a]ll benefit requests must be filed in accordance with the form instructions." A.R.
20 5. Accordingly, the AAO concluded that "a Form I-212 requesting permission to reapply for 21 admission under section 212(a)(9)(C)(ii) of the Act may not be filed by an applicant from within 22 the United States and must be filed from abroad." A.R. 5. The AAO's decision does not address 23 the legal basis for the instructions on the form.

24           The AAO acknowledged that Plaintiff's "entry into the United States with parole did not 25 constitute an admission, and that individuals seeking asylum should not be punished from seeking 26 humanitarian protection at a port of entry[.]" A.R. 6; see A.R. 17-42 (Pl.'s Brief in Support of 27 Appeal). However, it concluded that "there is no provision allowing USCIS to adjudicate a Form 28 I-212 requesting permission to reapply under section 212(a)(9)(C)(ii) of the Act filed from within

1 the United States.” A.R. 6. The AAO noted the existence of 8 C.F.R. § 212.2, a regulation that it 2 described as “allow[ing] foreign nationals inadmissible under section 212(a)(9)(A) of the Act who 3 are inside the United States and applying for adjustment of status to be granted retroactive 4 permission to reapply for admission,” but stated that the Board of Immigration Appeals (“BIA”) 5 “found that this regulation was not promulgated to implement section 212(a)(9)(C) of the Act” in 6 Matter of Torres-Garcia, 23 I. & N. Dec. 866 (BIA 2006). A.R. 6 (citing 8 C.F.R. § 212.2(e) and 7 (1)). Finally, it noted that in Gonzales, 508 F.3d at 1242, the Ninth Circuit had deferred to the 8 BIA’s interpretation of 8 C.F.R. § 212.2 in Torres-Garcia, and stated, “The alien is bound by 9 subsection (a)(9)(C)(ii), requiring that he obtain permission to apply for readmission from outside 10 the United States after ten years have lapsed from the date of his last departure.” A.R. 6 (quoting 11 Gonzales, 508 F.3d at 1242).

12 Plaintiff filed this lawsuit on July 3, 2019, challenging the AAO’s February 27, 2019 13 decision under the APA.

14 II. LEGAL STANDARDS

15 Plaintiff contends that the AAO’s February 27, 2019 decision is both “not in accordance 16 with law” and arbitrary and capricious under the APA, 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A). That provision 17 states that a reviewing court “shall . . . hold unlawful and set aside agency action, findings, and 18 conclusions found to be—(A) arbitrary, capricious, an abuse of discretion, or otherwise not in 19 accordance with law . . .”

20 In this case, whether the AAO’s decision is “not in accordance with law” “is a question of 21 statutory interpretation, rather than an assessment of reasonableness.” See Singh v. Clinton, 618 22 F.3d 1085, 1088 (9th Cir. 2010) (reviewing an APA challenge to the State Department’s 23 termination of a visa based on its failure to follow the INA and its own regulations). An agency’s 24 interpretation or application of a statute is a question of law subject to de novo review, Snoqualmie 25 Indian Tribe v. F.E.R.C., 545 F.3d 1207, 1212 (9th Cir. 2008), and “[a]gency action is ‘not in 26 accordance with the law’ when it is in conflict with the language of the statute relied upon by the 27 agency.” Nw. Envtl. Advocates v. U.S. E.P.A., 537 F.3d 1006, 1014 (9th Cir. 2008) (quoting 28 Cleveland v. Ohio, 508 F.3d 827, 838 (6th Cir. 2007)). Courts reviewing an agency’s statutory

1 interpretation under the “not in accordance with law standard” apply the two-step framework
2 established in Chevron U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, 467 U.S. 837 (1984).
3 Nw. Envtl. Advocates, 537 F.3d at 1014. “If the statute is ambiguous, the agency’s decision is 4 entitled to Chevron deference if it has the force of law.” High Sierra Hikers Ass’n v. Blackwell, 5 390 F.3d 630, 638 (9th Cir. 2004); see also Snoqualmie Indian Tribe, 545 F.3d at 1212-13 (citing 6 Chevron, 467 U.S. at 843). “Deference in accordance with Chevron, however, is warranted only 7 ‘when it appears that Congress delegated authority to the agency generally to make rules carrying 8 the force of law, and that the agency interpretation claiming deference was promulgated in the 9 exercise of that authority.’” Gonzales v. Oregon, 546 U.S. 243, 255-56 (2006) (quoting United 10 States v. Mead Corp., 533 U.S. 218, 226-227 (2001)). “Otherwise, the interpretation is ‘entitled to 11 respect’ only to the extent it has the ‘power to persuade.’” Id. (quoting Skidmore v. Swift & Co., 12 323 U.S. 134, 140 (1944)); see also High Sierra, 390 F.3d at 638-39 (“If the decision does not 13 have the force of law, it is reviewed with ‘respect’ according to the factors set out in Mead and 14 Skidmore.” (citation omitted)).

15 Review under the APA’s arbitrary and capricious standard is deferential. Nat'l Ass'n of 16 Home Builders v. Defs. of Wildlife, 551 U.S. 644, 658 (2007). In such cases, a district court’s role 17 is not fact-finding. Nw. Motorcycle Ass’n v. U.S. Dep’t of Agric., 18 F.3d 1468, 1472 (9th Cir.
18 1994). “[T]he function of the district court is to determine whether or not as a matter of law the 19 evidence in the administrative record permitted the agency to make the decision it did.”
20 Occidental Eng’g Co. v. I.N.S., 753 F.2d 766, 769 (9th Cir. 1985). A court should not vacate an 21 agency’s decision unless it has “relied on factors which Congress had not intended it to consider, 22 entirely failed to consider an important aspect of the problem, offered an explanation for its 23 decision that runs counter to the evidence before the agency, or is so implausible that it could not 24 be ascribed to a difference in view or the product of agency expertise.” Nat'l Ass'n of Home 25 Builders, 551 U.S. at 658 (quoting Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass’n of U.S., Inc. v. State Farm Mut.
26 Auto. Ins. Co., 463 U.S. 29, 43 (1983)).

27 Finally, “[i]t is well-established that an agency’s action must be upheld, if at all, on the 28 basis articulated by the agency itself.” Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass’n, 463 U.S. at 50; see also Sec. &

1       Exch. Comm'n v. Chenery Corp., 318 U.S. 80, 87 (1943) (“The grounds upon which an 2 administrative order must be judged are those upon which the record discloses its action was 3 based.”). Courts may not “supply a reasoned basis for the agency’s action that the agency itself 4 has not given,” but may “uphold a decision of less than ideal clarity if the agency’s path may 5 reasonably be discerned.” Bowman Transp., Inc. v. Ark.-Best Freight Sys., 419 U.S. 281, 285-86 6 (1974) (citations omitted).

7       III. DISCUSSION

8       Plaintiff makes two arguments in support of his contention that the court should set aside 9 the AAO’s February 27, 2019 decision finding him ineligible to apply for permission to reapply 10 for admission because he is currently located in the United States. First, he argues that the 11 decision is “contrary to law” because USCIS “inexplicably and unjustifiably engrafted” a 12 physical-presence requirement onto 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii). Pl.’s Mot. 7. Second, Plaintiff 13 argues that the decision is arbitrary and capricious because the agency failed to provide a reasoned 14 explanation for its decision. Id. at 15-16. In response, Defendants assert that the AAO’s decision 15 is consistent with section 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii) and is not arbitrary and capricious.

16       As noted, a noncitizen is inadmissible if he or she “enters or attempts to enter the United 17 States without being admitted” after having been “unlawfully present in the United States for an 18 aggregate period of more than 1 year” or having “been ordered removed” from the country. 8 19 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(i). However, a noncitizen’s prior removal or period of unlawful presence 20 does not stand as a permanent bar to admissibility if that person has been absent from the United 21 States for more than 10 years:

22       [Section 1182(a)(9)(C)(i)] shall not apply to an alien seeking 23 admission more than 10 years after the date of the alien’s . . . attempt to 24 be readmitted from a foreign contiguous territory, the Secretary of 25 Homeland Security has consented to the alien’s reapplying for 26 admission.

27       8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii).<sup>4</sup>

28       <sup>4</sup> The statute also provides that a noncitizen must seek consent to reapply for admission prior to his or her “reembarkation at a place outside the United States . . .” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii).
Defendants do not contend that the reembarkation provision applies in this case. Defs.’ Mot. 12;

1       The parties agree that Plaintiff is inadmissible under section 1182(a)(9)(C)(i). They also 2 agree that he meets the first of two requirements for falling within the exception to inadmissibility;
3 it is undisputed that Plaintiff was absent from the United States for more than ten years prior to his 4 current attempt to be admitted. See A.R. 5 (“The record shows the Applicant then resided in 5 Mexico for more than 10 years.”). At issue is Plaintiff’s ability to satisfy the second requirement 6 of the exception; that is, whether he can obtain the Secretary of Homeland Security’s consent to 7 reapply for admission “prior to [his] . . . attempt to be readmitted from a foreign contiguous 8 territory[.]” See 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii). The AAO concluded that even though Plaintiff is 9 eligible to seek consent to reapply for admission, “he may not do so from within the United 10 States” and “must file his application from abroad.” A.R. 6. In reaching this conclusion, the AAO 11 relied on the instructions for Form I-212, which state “you may not file an application for consent 12 to reapply if you are inadmissible under INA section 212(a)(9)(C) and . . . [y]ou are in the United 13 States.” A.R. 5. The AAO also noted the absence of a “provision allowing USCIS to adjudicate a 14 Form I-212 . . . filed from within the United States.” A.R. 6.

15       Plaintiff argues that the AAO’s decision is contrary to law because the statute does not 16 impose a rule that bars a noncitizen from seeking consent to reapply for admission if he or she is 17 physically present in the United States. He asserts that requiring applicants to apply from outside 18 the United States is at odds with the statute, which focuses on admission and not physical 19 presence. Section 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii) provides that a noncitizen must seek permission to reapply for 20 admission before his or her “attempt to be readmitted from a foreign contiguous territory.” 21 However, Plaintiff asserts that “admission to and physical presence in the United States are 22 distinct concepts with distinct statutory meanings” under the INA. Pl.’s Mot. 9 (emphasis in 23 original). According to Plaintiff, under the INA a noncitizen may be physically present in the 24 United States without having sought admission or having been admitted, and the AAO’s decision 25 improperly conflates the two concepts.

26       Plaintiff makes two primary arguments to support his claim that the concepts of admission 27

28 see also Pl.’s Mot. 8 n.2.

1 and physical presence are distinct. First, he asserts that the INA defines the terms “admission” and 2 “admitted” in a way that demonstrates that they mean something other than mere physical 3 presence. Under the INA, “admission” and “admitted” mean “the lawful entry of [an] alien into 4 the United States after inspection and authorization by an immigration officer.” 8 U.S.C. § 5 1101(a)(13)(A). As the Ninth Circuit has explained, Congress added this definition for a specific 6 reason. Prior to the IIRIRA, the INA distinguished noncitizens on the basis of “entry” instead of 7 “admission.” Noncitizens who made an “entry” into the United States were subject to deportation 8 proceedings, while those who had not were sent into exclusion proceedings. Hing Sum v. Holder, 9 602 F.3d 1092, 1099-1100 (9th Cir. 2010) (citations omitted). As a result, “non-citizens who had 10 entered without inspection could take advantage of the greater procedural and substantive rights 11 afforded in deportation proceedings, while non-citizens who presented themselves at a port of 12 entry for inspection were subjected to more summary exclusion proceedings.” Id. at 1100.
13 “IIRIRA addressed this anomaly by substituting ‘admission’ for ‘entry’ and by replacing 14 deportation and exclusion proceedings with a general ‘removal’ proceeding. Id. According to 15 Plaintiff, the fact that Congress replaced “entry” with “admission” “reflects the settled 16 understanding that admission and physical presence after entry are not synonymous.” Pl.’s Mot. 9 17 n.3.

18 Plaintiff also notes the existence of several provisions of the INA where immigration status 19 or other benefit turns on physical presence, rather than admission. For example, 8 U.S.C. § 20 1255(i)(1) allows a noncitizen who is “physically present in the United States” to apply for 21 adjustment of his or her status to that of a lawful permanent resident. Another provision, 8 U.S.C.
22 § 1101(15)(T)(i)(II), makes a certain type of nonimmigrant visa available to noncitizens who are 23 “physically present in the United States, American Samoa, or the Commonwealth of the Northern 24 Mariana Islands, or at a port of entry thereto” due to human trafficking. According to Plaintiff, 25 these examples demonstrate that when Congress intended to condition an immigration status or 26 benefit on physical presence rather than admission, “it said just that.” Pl.’s Mot. 9-10.

27 Second, Plaintiff argues that the INA plainly contemplates that a noncitizen may be 28 physically present in the United States without having been admitted. In particular, the statute

1 under which Plaintiff was paroled into the United States expressly states that parole “shall not be 2 regarded as an admission of the alien.” 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A); accord 8 U.S.C. § 3 1101(a)(13)(B) (“[a]n alien who is paroled under section 1182(d)(5) of this title . . . shall not be 4 considered to have been admitted.”).

5 Based on the foregoing, Plaintiff argues that physical presence is not synonymous with the 6 concept of “admission” under the INA. Therefore, a noncitizen may be physically present in the 7 United States without having sought admission or having been admitted. According to Plaintiff, 8 the AAO’s decision that Plaintiff may not apply for permission to reapply for admission from 9 within the United States inappropriately merged the two concepts and was thus contrary to the 10 statute.

11 Defendants do not dispute Plaintiff’s contentions that the terms “admission” and “physical 12 presence” are not synonymous under the INA, nor do they dispute that “parole is not admission.”
13 Defs.’ Mot. 10. Instead, they argue that the AAO’s decision finding Plaintiff ineligible to reapply 14 for admission from within the United States was not contrary to the statute for two reasons: 1) 15 Plaintiff was “an applicant for admission” at the time he presented himself at a port of entry in 16 June 2014, and thus was required to have filed the Form I-212 before that time; and 2) section 17 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii)’s reference to a noncitizen’s “attempt to be readmitted from a foreign contiguous 18 territory” means that a Form I-212 must be filed from a foreign contiguous territory. Id. at 10-12.

19 Notably, the AAO’s decision did not rely on either of the arguments now raised by 20 Defendants. Rather, the AAO concluded that Plaintiff is ineligible to file “from within the United 21 States” because the Form I-212 instructions require that the application be made from outside the 22 United States. The AAO did not analyze or explain why or how the instructions are consistent 23 with the statute. The AAO also stated that “there [was] no provision allowing USCIS to 24 adjudicate a Form I-212 . . . filed from within the United States,” apparently referring to a lack of 25 a corresponding regulation, without analyzing whether section 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii) itself contains 26 such authority. A.R. 5-6. Defendants do not defend or discuss the AAO’s reasoning in any detail 27 in their motion; instead they rest on entirely new reasons.

28 Defendants’ positions thus suffer from a fatal flaw: they are being raised for the first time

1 in this lawsuit, and do not reflect the reasoning provided by the agency in the first instance. As 2 noted, “an agency’s action must be upheld, if at all, on the basis articulated by the agency itself.”
3 Motor Vehicle Mfrs. Ass’n, 463 U.S. at 50; see also Sec. & Exch. Comm’n v. Chenery Corp., 332 4 U.S. 194, 196 (1947) (“a reviewing court, in dealing with a determination or judgment which an 5 administrative agency alone is authorized to make, must judge the propriety of such action solely 6 by the grounds invoked by the agency.”). This principle extends to questions of statutory 7 interpretation. For example, in Department of Agriculture, Food & Nutrition Service, W. Region
8 v. Federal Labor Relations Authority, 895 F.2d 1239, 1241 (9th Cir. 1990), the Ninth Circuit 9 granted a petition for rehearing and vacated a prior opinion and its mandate, explaining that in its 10 previous decision, it had upheld the ruling of the Federal Labor Relations Authority (“FLRA”) on 11 a particular legal issue “on a rationale different from that relied upon by the [FLRA] itself,” which 12 was improper. Id. at 1240. Further, the court noted, “and more important, [its] ruling decided a 13 question of statutory interpretation that had not been directly addressed by the [FLRA].” Id. at 14 1240-41. Accordingly, the Ninth Circuit remanded the matter to the FLRA to answer the statutory 15 interpretation question “in the first instance.” Id. at 1241. See also City of Kansas City, Mo. v.
16 Dep’t of Hous. & Urban Dev., 923 F.2d 188, 192 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (concluding that agency’s 17 statutory construction offered for the first time in litigation was not entitled to deference and 18 remanding to agency “for initial consideration” of the statutory question).

19 The principle that “[a]n agency’s decision can be upheld only on the basis of the reasoning 20 in that decision,” Snoqualmie Indian Tribe, 545 F.3d at 1212, applies in the context of 21 immigration law. See, e.g., Recinos De Leon v. Gonzales, 400 F.3d 1185, 1189 (9th Cir. 2005) 22 (“We may affirm the [immigration judge] only on grounds set forth in the opinion under 23 review.”); Navas v. INS, 217 F.3d 646, 658 n.16 (9th Cir. 2000) (“this court cannot affirm the BIA
24 on a ground upon which it did not rely.”); Pacheco v. INS, 5 Fed. Appx. 633, 635 (9th Cir. 2001) 25 (while finding that the INS’s argument on appeal was “correct,” vacating the BIA’s decision 26 because the court “cannot review the BIA’s decision on any basis other than that expressly relied 27 on by the agency” (citing Chenery, 318 U.S. at 87 and Dep’t of Agric., 895 F.2d at 1240-41)).
28 Here, Defendants offer no authority permitting the court to affirm the AAO’s decision on grounds

1 not invoked by the agency. Accordingly, the court declines to consider Defendants' post hoc 2 rationalizations for the AAO's decision which are being offered for the first time in this litigation.

3 Aside from Defendants' new justifications offered to bolster the AAO's decision, the only 4 other argument they make to support their contention that the AAO's decision is not contrary to 5 the statute is a request for deference to that decision. According to Defendants, if the court
6 determines that the statute is ambiguous, it should find that USCIS's interpretation is persuasive 7 under Mead and Skidmore and accord it deference because it "is thorough, well-reasoned, and 8 consistent with precedential decisions from the Ninth Circuit and Board of Immigration Appeals."
9 Defs.' Mot. 13.

10 As noted, Chevron deference to an agency's interpretation "is warranted only 'when it 11 appears that Congress delegated authority to the agency generally to make rules carrying the force 12 of law, and that the agency interpretation claiming deference was promulgated in the exercise of 13 that authority.'" Gonzales, 546 U.S. at 255-56 (quoting Mead, 533 U.S. at 226-227). Otherwise, 14 the agency's interpretation "is reviewed with 'respect' according to the factors set out in Mead and 15 Skidmore." High Sierra, 390 F.3d at 638-39. In Mead, the Supreme Court held that "agencies 16 charged with applying a statute necessarily make all sorts of interpretive choices, and while not all 17 of those choices bind judges to follow them, they certainly may influence courts facing questions 18 the agencies have already answered." 533 U.S. at 227. Under Skidmore, the degree to which a 19 court defers to an agency's opinion or interpretation "will depend upon the thoroughness evident 20 in its consideration, the validity of its reasoning, its consistency with earlier and later 21 pronouncements, and all those factors which give it power to persuade, if lacking power to 22 control." Skidmore, 323 U.S. at 140; see also Mead, 533 U.S. at 227 ("courts have looked to the 23 degree of an agency's care, its consistency, formality, and relative expertness, and to the 24 persuasiveness of the agency's position." (citations omitted)).

25 The court finds that deference to the AAO's decision is unwarranted. First and foremost, 26 Defendants do not identify any ambiguity in the statute in question that would necessitate the 27 court's consideration of the persuasiveness of the agency's interpretation. Section 28 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii) permits an otherwise inadmissible noncitizen to seek the Secretary of Homeland

1 Security's consent to reapply for admission if he or she does so before "attempt[ing] to be 2 readmitted from a foreign contiguous territory." It does not state that such a noncitizen must seek 3 consent before he or she physically enters the United States. Instead, the statute refers to 4 admission, which Defendants concede is distinct from physical presence after entry. Therefore, by 5 its own terms, the statute does not impose a requirement that a noncitizen be physically outside the 6 country before attempting to be readmitted or seeking consent to reapply for admission. The AAO
7 did not discuss the statutory language. Instead, it grounded its decision on the form instructions 8 without engaging in any discussion or analysis of the instructions themselves and how they 9 embody a legitimate interpretation of the statute. The AAO made a further conclusory statement 10 about the absence of a "provision allowing USCIS to adjudicate a Form I-212 . . . filed from 11 within the United States" without analyzing whether the statute itself constituted such authority.

12 A.R. 5-6.

13 Even if section 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii) contained an ambiguity, the AAO's decision is not the 14 type of consistent, formal, and persuasive explanation that would be entitled to deference under 15 Mead and Skidmore. As set forth above, the decision is void of statutory analysis and falls far 16 short of the thorough and persuasive discussion that would support deference. As to the decision's 17 "consistency with earlier and later pronouncements," see Skidmore, 323 U.S. at 140, Defendants 18 appear to rely on the BIA's decision in Torres-Garcia and the Ninth Circuit's opinion in 19 Gonzales, both of which the AAO cited in its decision. However, those opinions are inapposite, as 20 they addressed a regulation that Plaintiff does not invoke in this case, 8 C.F.R. § 212.2. See Pl.'s 21 Mot. 13. In relevant part, 8 C.F.R. § 212.2 authorizes noncitizens who are present in the United 22 States to seek permission to apply for admission retroactively in conjunction with an application 23 for adjustment of status. See 8 C.F.R. § 212.2(e), (i)(2). Torres-Garcia and Gonzales addressed 24 whether 8 C.F.R. § 212.2 allows noncitizens who are unlawfully present in the United States and 25 inadmissible under section 1182(a)(9)(C)(i) to seek retroactive permission to reapply for 26 admission in conjunction with an application for adjustment of status. Torres-Garcia, 23 I. & N.
27 Dec. at 873-74. The BIA rejected that argument, concluding that the regulation "was not 28 promulgated" to implement section 1182(a)(9); instead, it was intended to implement a now-

1 defunct section of the INA. Id. at 874. Torres-Garcia did not address the issue presented here;
 2 namely, whether section 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii) imposes a requirement that a noncitizen must be outside 3 the United States in order to file an application for permission to reapply for admission. In 4 Gonzales, the Ninth Circuit concluded that Torres-Garcia's interpretation of section 1182(a)(9)(C)
 5 and 8 C.F.R. § 212.2 was reasonable and entitled to deference under Chevron. 508 F.3d at 1239-
 6 42. Torres-Garcia and Gonzales have little bearing on this case, as Plaintiff does not invoke 8 7 C.F.R. § 212.2. See Pl.'s Mot. 13.

8 Defendants also appear to rely on a statement in Gonzales that section 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii) 9 "require[s] that [a noncitizen] obtain permission to apply for readmission from outside the United 10 States." 508 F.3d at 1242 (emphasis added). See A.R. at 6. As discussed, the issue in Gonzales
 11 was whether the statutory interpretation in Torres-Garcia was reasonable and entitled to Chevron 12 deference. Unlike Plaintiff, none of the plaintiffs in Gonzales had been paroled into the United 13 States before attempting to be admitted,<sup>5</sup> and the Ninth Circuit did not analyze the question of 14 whether section 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii) requires an applicant to be outside the United States when 15 seeking permission to reapply for admission. Its statement suggesting such a requirement is 16 dicta.<sup>6</sup> In sum, the court concludes that deference to the AAO's decision under Skidmore is not 17 warranted.

18 The court concludes that the AAO's decision that Plaintiff was required to seek consent to 19 file a Form I-212 "from abroad" is contrary to law. As stated above, section 1182(a)(9)(C)(ii)
 20 permits an otherwise inadmissible noncitizen to seek the Secretary of Homeland Security's 21 consent to reapply for admission if he does so before he "attempt[s] to be readmitted from a 22 foreign contiguous territory." It does not state that the noncitizen must seek consent before his or 23

24 <sup>5</sup> In Gonzales, the named plaintiffs were "seven Mexican citizens who ha[d] previously been 25 deported or removed from the United States and ha[d] reentered without permission or detection." 509 F.3d at 1231.

26 <sup>6</sup> Defendants also cite Carrillo de Palacios v. Holder, 708 F.3d 1066, 1070 (9th Cir. 2013), in 27 which the Ninth Circuit quoted its previous description of section 1182(a)(9)(c)(ii) from Gonzales. Like Gonzales, the Carrillo de Palacios decision does not analyze the question of whether the 28 statute requires a noncitizen to seek permission to apply for readmission from outside the United States.

1 her physical entry into the United States. The statute instead uses the term “admission,” a concept 2 that is distinct from physical presence after entry under the INA. Therefore, by its own terms, the 3 statute does not impose a requirement that a noncitizen be physically outside the country before 4 attempting to be readmitted or seeking consent to reapply for admission. The AAO thus violated 5 the APA when it rejected Plaintiff’s Form I-212 on the ground that he was required to file the 6 application from outside the United States. Because the court finds that USCIS violated the APA 7 on this ground, it need not reach Plaintiff’s remaining argument that the decision was “arbitrary 8 and capricious.”

9 IV. CONCLUSION

10 For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiff’s motion is granted in part and denied in part. The 11 parties shall immediately meet and confer regarding a proposed judgment and shall submit a 12 stipulated proposed judgment within 14 days of the date of this order.
